

MEP and EPA Staff Receive the Bronze Medal for Green Supplier Network

Green Supplier Network (GSN) is a collaborative venture between the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Dept of Commerce National Institute of Standards and Technology's Manufacturing Extension Partnership and numerous industry sectors, which include aerospace, automotive, healthcare, and office furniture. Suppliers are able to continuously improve their products and processes, increase energy efficiency, identify cost-saving opportunities, and optimize resources and technologies with the aim of eliminating waste.

Kari Reidy, front left row, and Alex Folk, back row second from right, received the Bronze Medal for a Highly successful collaborative approach that is non-regulatory, cost-effective and reciprocally beneficial while achieving the highest level of environmental protection.

For more information on the Green Supplier Network collaborative effort, please go to <http://www.greensuppliers.gov/gsn/home.gsn>.

